Board hears concerns about school plan

by Susan Grober

All members of the community were given the opportunity last week have their say on the Haliburton County Board of Education's decision on accommodation.

But whether trustees will change their stand on the controversial project won't be known until the end of the month.

Members of the public spoke out against many different aspects of the board's plan to seek funding to build an elementary school in Haliburton Village and turn J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School into a junior high school for the entire county. The board also plans to build an addition onto Archie Stouffer Elementary School in Minden.

The board will have a final discussion on the matter during its April 28 meeting, Minden Trustee Wally Bunn told the number of people who crowded into the high school cafeteria to share their ideas and opinions.

Those who made presentations to the board provided a variety of ideas and opinions.

On behalf of Dysart council, Reeve Chris Hodgson said "we have great empathy" for trustees, who are facing a significant struggle in meeting the future accommodation needs of the county's school children.

However, he said fellow councillors have some concerns in the matter. Although the board has provided estimated construction costs of each option being considered, Hodgson said he would appreciate if the board would also provide a breakdown of everyday operating costs and transportation costs. "It would make us feel a little more comfortable," he said.

Glamorgan Reeve Beverly MacDuff made three points which provided some insight on the views of those living in the eastern parts of Haliburton County.

MacDuff said the board's plan to have smaller schools, such as the one in Gooderham, accommodate students up to Grade 6 would help alleviate overcrowding in Haliburton. Therefore, she questioned the need

Planning reform hot topic at FOCA

by Susan Grober

Local politicians angered over the provincial government's habit of downloading services onto municipalities shouldn't be surprised by what may be "loaded" onto them next.

The province's Commission on Planning and Development Reform wants to see municipalities become solely responsible for the installation, inspection and maintenance of all sewage systems in Ontario.

Commission chairman John Sewell shared this news as the guest speaker during the Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations' annual spring seminar held in Scarborough on April 11.

"To make them take a hard look at the problem, municipalities should be responsible to make sure new and old sewage systems are operating properly, and to shut them down if they're not."

However, Sewell doesn't expect the province will provide municipalities with any funding to help with these added responsibilities.

"I don't think the provincial government will have any money in the future, no matter what colour or hue," said the former Toronto mayor, adding that he doesn't think it will create a substantial cost to municipalities. "So we'll have to look at better ways of doing things without costing much money."

Minden Arena may lose annual Coby tournament

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Organizers of the annual Coby Islanders hockey tournament say they want to work with the recreation committee to make sure the event returns to Minden next year.

The tournament, which has been held in Minden on Easter weekend for the past 15 years, is one of the largest open tournaments in Ontario. This year, 48 teams registered for the three-day event. Games were also played at the arena in Haliburton village.

Leading up to the tournament this year, organizers expressed concerns about the cost of renting the facilities in Minden this year and said, unless their concerns are addressed, a new location may be found for next year.

Coboconk resident Pat Russell, a member of the Coby Islander hockey team which hosts the tournament, told The Times that the main concern is the increased cost of renting the ice.

In 1991, it cost $55 an hour to rent ice at the Minden arena. This year, during the regular hockey season, the cost of ice time increased to $65 an hour.

Because the Coby Islander tournament occurs after the regular season ends which requires the ice surface be left in the arena, organizers are charged a premium to cover the cost of maintaining the ice surface.

This year, the Minden recreation committee asked the Islanders to pay $75 an hour for the ice, but the organizers balked at the price and requested a meeting with the recreation committee to negotiate.

During the meeting, which was held on April 2, Minden businessman Mike Keaney spoke in support of the tournament because of the money which the event brings into the area. Organizers say the tournament generates $250,000 for the local economy.

Kearley brought up the concern of the cost of renting the arena and community centre, and asked committee members to take into account the fact that the tournament has been held in Minden for the past 15 years.

Snowdon resident George Simmons, a member of the Coby Islanders, also attended the meeting. Given the state of the economy, Simmons said the municipality should make every effort to keep the tournament, and the revenue it generates, in the area. He warned that the Town of Lindsay has been trying to persuade the Coby Islanders to move the tournament out of Minden.

Russell raised concerns about the cost of renting the ice and the community centre, the fact that nets are not moved during flooding, and that dressing rooms are not cleaned between games.

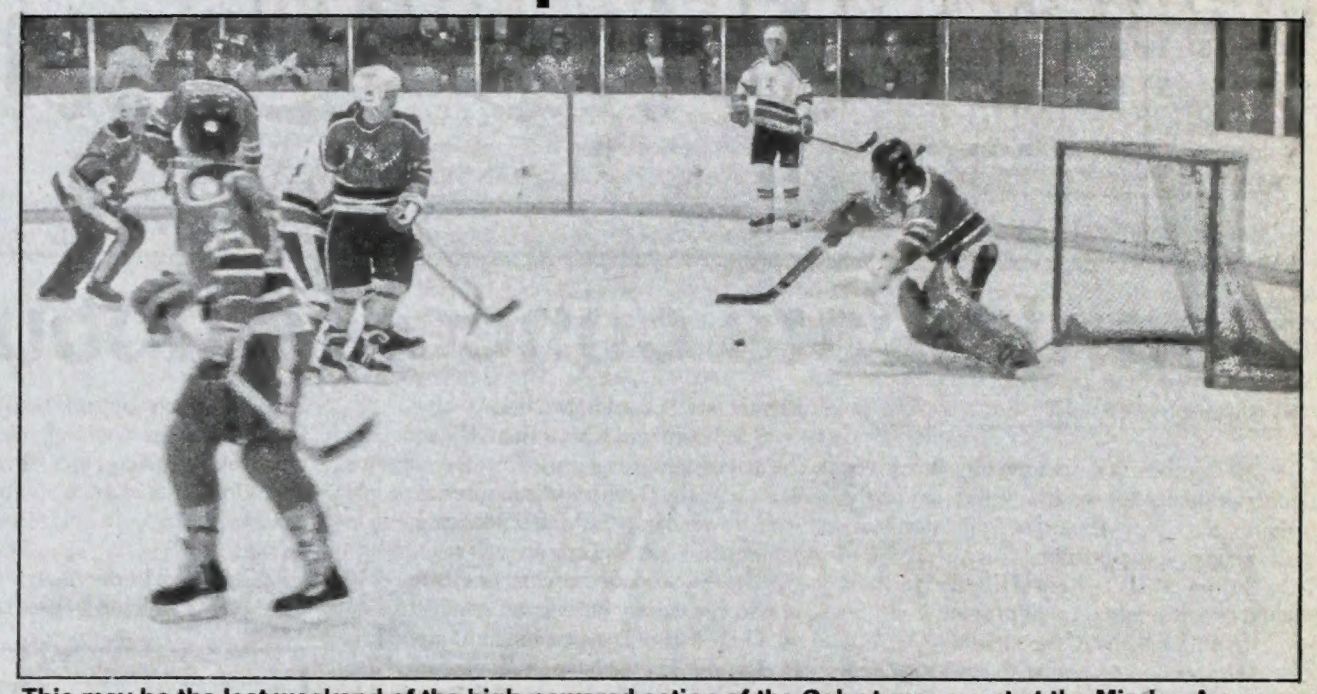
He asked that the Islanders be charged the regular season rate of $65 an hour for the weekend.

Tthe committee decided to decrease the cost of the ice time from $75 an hour to $70 an hour, providing the Coby Islanders guarantee ice rental of at least 45 hours. The committee further agreed to have the dressing rooms cleaned between games, to reduce the cost of renting the community centre to $650, and asked that the Islanders have one of their time keepers assist the arena staff to move the nets during flooding.

The committee noted that rate changes would only apply to the 1992 tournament and would not be considered a precedent for future events.

Members also agreed to meet again with Russell after the tournament to further discuss the Islanders' concerns in an effort to rectify the situation for next year.

Russell was called the day after the meeting and was informed of the committee's decision, and arena manager Brian Sisson sent a letter explaining the new rates and extending the committee's offer to meet after the tournament.



This may be the last weekend of the high-powered action of the Coby tournament at the Minden Arena.

In an interview last Thursday, Russell said the organizers' hands were tied for this year's event and they had no choice but accept the committee's conditions because there was no time to make other arrangements.

While appreciative of concessions made by the committee with regard to the dressing rooms and the moving of nets, Russell said organizers are still concerned about the rental costs.

"It's a case of economics," he said. "Three or four hundred dollars may not sound like much, but when it costs more than $30,000 to put on a tournament, there is no room for error."

Russell said the organizers don't like the idea of the recreation committee dictating the number of hours that the ice must be rented for the tournament.

The money raised by the Coby Islanders has been used to sponsor a minor hockey team in Minden; support Ronald McDonald House; help sponsor minor baseball in Coboconk and has been donated to equipment purchase at the hospital in Peterborough.

Russell says the organizers will meet with the recreation committee and he hopes any remaining concerns can be ironed out so the tournament can be held in Minden next year.

"We don't want to move and we hope we can straighten it out for next year," he said. "We don't want to cause problems or hard feelings. If we can't come to terms, it will be best to just quietly leave."

Arena manager Brian Sisson said the increased cost of renting the arena reflects an increase in operation cost. He said the rate charged by Minden is not out of line when compared to other arenas in the area.

Weavers marry the old with the new

by Susan Grober

To take a step into the Agnes Jamieson Gallery is to find yourself in a bedroom of the past.

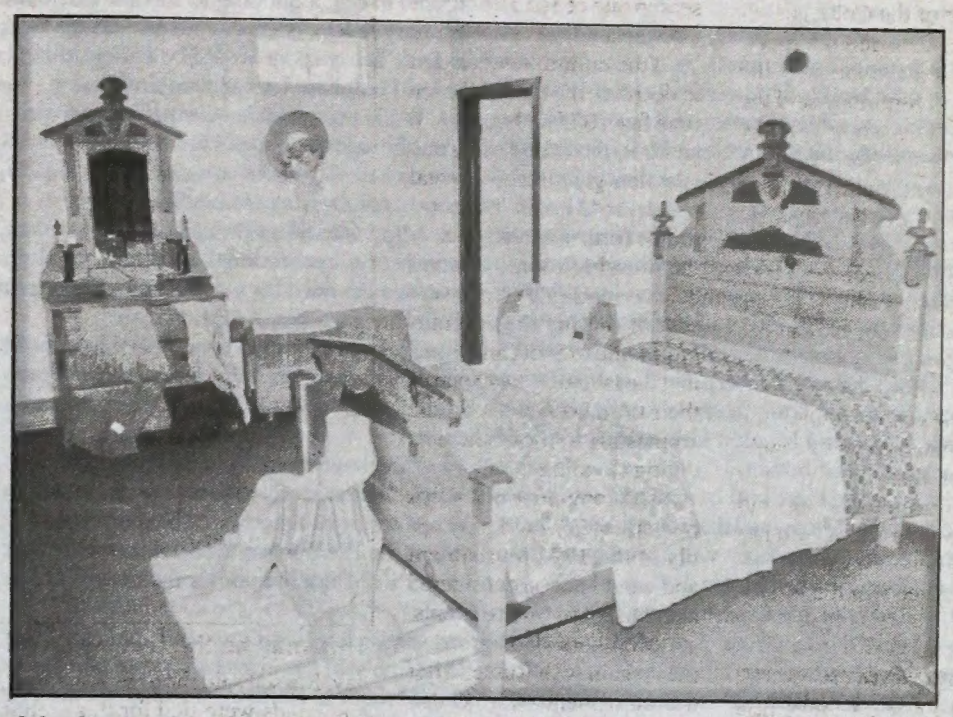
The gallery's current exhibit, Tomorrow's Heirlooms, features a variety of creations by 13 members of the Haliburton Highlands Handweavers and Spinners.

To display the work, the gallery has utilized a bedroom setting, featuring antique and reproduction furniture. This unique concept reflects the imagination of the weavers and spinners; and the furniture reflects the enduring quality of their venerable craft.

The focal point of the main room is a three-piece, antique reproduction bedroom set, crafted out of pine by local cabinetmaker Merv Bunker.

On top of the chest of drawers is a bright yellow runner, woven by Ginnie Muenzel, and a reusable lunch bag, woven by Vicki Cross.

Hanging out of the dresser drawers are a number of woven items by different artists. And the soft folds of cream-coloured fabric hanging on the wall above the bed are actually Cross's new set of living room curtains, which she hasn't completed yet.



A bedroom provides the perfect setting to display the Haliburton Highlands Handweavers and Spinners' exhibit at the Agnes Jamieson Gallery in Minden. Entitled Tomorrow's Heirlooms, the exhibit runs until May 9.

Covered in a cozy blanket woven by Shirley Hodgson, the Agnes Jamieson Gallery's Acting Manager, Irene Lubowitz, demonstrates a yarn spinner on loan for a current exhibit of work by local weavers and spinners.

The materials used in weaving aren't restricted to wool and cotton. At the foot of the bed is a basket, also woven by Cross.

Covering the bed are four coverlets woven in the traditional Whig Rose pattern by different artists. All are woven with the same white background, but each artist chose a separate colour for the weft. Barbara Leahey's is blue, Cross chose a blue-tinged grey, Claire MacLeod used beige, and Sheila Ziman's is wine.

Shirley Hodgson also wove a blanket using the same pattern, but she used a yarn which she spun herself and dyed a vivid shade of salmon. The blanket hangs beside the bed, on a quilt rack Hodgson loaned the gallery.

A vintage 1800s screen, on loan from Gambell's Antiques and Collectibles, stands at the far end of the "bedroom."

The blankets which adorn the screen show the diverse talents of our local weavers. Bateman's is beige, white, blue, lilac and green; Cross's is beige and brown; and MacLeod's is inspired by the pink and purple hues of African violets.

"It's interesting to see the different colours people choose," Lubowitz says of the many works on display.

Muenzel's contributions to the exhibit reflect this Haliburton weaver's passion for bold, bright colours. A tablecloth she designed along with Bateman is outstanding in its striking shades of blue, peach, rose, green, raspberry and plum. "It looks like a coat of many colours," Lubowitz says.

Bateman also has a great variety of woven items on display, and all show the great creativity of this innovative master weaver.

Other members of the Haliburton Highlands Handweavers and Spinners who have contributed to the exhibit include Jean Farrell, Jean Hadley, Nancy Hubert, Marian Langdon, and Mariet Vandenbrink.

"The work is really set off nicely by all the people who donated items," says Lubowitz.

Along with the items already mentioned, a mattress and box spring were provided by Riverview Furniture.

Items on display which were donated to the gallery include a decorated hat by June Anderson, and rug-hooking pieces by May Bradbury.

The display runs until May 9, and an opening reception will be held Thursday, April 23, at 7 p.m.

Currently on display at the gallery's student showcase are a collection of pioneer dolls made by Grade 5 students of Archie Stouffer Elementary School, and drawings of urban, suburban, and rural communities by students in one of the schools' Grade 3 classes.

Also on display is one of the Haliburton tartan blankets woven by members of the Handweavers and Spinners group.

The gallery will hold a draw for the blanket on October 5 at 10 a.m. Tickets are $1 each, and are currently on sale at the gallery.

The gallery is open Monday to Saturday, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Call 286-3762 for more information.

In other weaving and spinning news, the president and board of directors of the Haliburton Highlands Guild of Fine Arts' Rails' End Gallery will hold an artists' reception for the Ontario Handweavers and Spinners Weaving Certificate Graduation Exhibition.

The reception will be held at the Rails' End Gallery this Saturday, April 25, from 4 to 6 p.m.

Many opposed to junior high school plan for a junior high school.

MacDuff also questioned the need of building double gymnasiums, when there are other recreational facilities in both Minden and Haliburton. "Our students use the community centre," she said.

MacDuff also asked why the new resource library at the high school couldn't be used by elementary level students. "Perhaps pooling our resources would be more feasible in these hard economic times," she said.

In her presentation on behalf of Minden council, Jean Anthon spoke out against the idea of busing Minden kids to a junior high school in Haliburton.

She said there will be a greater risk of accidents, and also noted that some parents "have indicated our children will spend more time with bus drivers than we do."

Raymond Ranson and Stacey Walker represented fellow Grade 7 students of Archie Stouffer Elementary School.

Ranson said Minden students "want to stay together in our own community." He objected to the thought of busing students to a junior high school in Haliburton.

Pointing out that it's hard enough for Minden kids to adjust to relocating in Haliburton for high school, Ranson said it will be even more difficult for them to adjust to relocating twice in three years.

"If a junior high is necessary, build it in Minden," said Ranson. "Our grounds are soil, and the grounds in Haliburton are rock" so it would cost less to build in Minden.

Even if building a junior high school in Minden means students would miss out on some school programs, Ranson said he and others would find that preferable to being bused.

"Our community is very important to us, and we feel it's important to stay in our own town," said Walker.

Walker said bus rides are tiring, and she expressed concern over the possibility of accidents. She also noted that the cost of busing, which is funded by the province, will continue to increase "and never end."

She also expressed disdain for the current situation in Minden, where the board has been forced to rent a building to accommodate its primary level students. Walker feels the rent money being spent would be better utilized toward building a new school in Minden.

Walker commended the trustees for listening. She said she hopes trustees "will listen to our plea to stay in our own community, and I hope a solution is possible."

Minden resident Bruna Foran, who runs a non-profit recreational badminton club, stressed the need for a double gymnasium in Minden.

This year, the club's membership is made up of 95 teenagers and 26 adults, and Foran said the area's recreational facilities are sadly lacking.

"We have from 24 to 36 people out each week," she said. "Needless to say, we spend a lot of time sitting down... the gym at Archie Stouffer Elementary School is used every night in Minden, and it's the only place to play."

Snowdon resident and parent Peter McGinn said the implementation of a junior high school in Haliburton would mean a significant increase in busing time for his children.

While they currently spend 20 minutes at most to travel to Archie Stouffer Elementary School, McGinn's children would spend an estimated one hour and fifteen minutes on the bus to Haliburton.

"That's two-and-a-half hours both ways," stressed McGinn. "I would certainly hope my trustee would not go for that option."

McGinn said he doesn't like the idea of junior high school. However, if one is needed, he said it isn't right to have both the junior high and the high school in Haliburton Village. McGinn suggested building a junior high in Minden to "divide the busing time between the two communities as a whole... it only seems fair."

Director of Education Brad Saunders provided some insight from the board's standpoint. Saunders said trustees are faced with a great challenge in determining future accommodation in the county.

He said each individual who considers the matter uses different criteria for what is important, so there can be a conflict of opinion.

Those who have no school age children consider tax dollars, while others who have children or grandchildren want quality programs, said Saunders.

"The major difficulty for the 15 trustees of your Board of Education is to try to ensure your goodwill," and come up with a solution to benefit everyone, he said.

Following a prepared statement provided to those in attendance, Saunders said trustees must determine a plan which: facilitates the delivery of the highest quality program; is cost effective; is sufficiently flexible to meet future needs; is least disruptive to existing student enrolment patterns; has the support of the communities most directly affected.

The board must come up with a solution to overcrowding problems. At present, 240 Archie Stouffer students, and 100 Victoria Street Elementary School students are located in temporary accommodation. And the board predicts that starting in 1995 and accelerating toward 1998, there will be an excess of enrolment at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School approaching 124 students.

Another problem the board faces is the provincial government's program to implement mandatory Junior Kindergarten classes by 1994. Each of the board's options has been revised to allow for Junior Kindergarten.

Trustees approved the accommodation plan last October. But it wasn't until January, when the board hosted public meetings in Minden and Haliburton, that residents spoke out in opposition.

Parents were angered that Grade 7 and 8 students from Minden would be bused to Haliburton once the junior high school is built. And trustees were accused of making their decision without providing any opportunity for public input.

In response to concerns, Minden council hosted a public meeting on the accommodation issue in February.

At the meeting, Doug Campbell and Bryan Kernohan presented another accommodation option, which involves adding 16 classrooms to Archie Stouffer Elementary School, and 12 classrooms to J.D. Hodgson. This plan would cost $1.6 million less than the board's chosen option, and would allow Grade 7 to 9 students from the western end of the county to attend school in Minden.

FOCA Spring Seminar

Municipalities may be made responsible for sewage systems

The commission had previously proposed banning private septic systems altogether by 1996, provided alternatives were available. This "first recommendation caused a lot of debate," so the commission agreed to rethink its draft goal "and we're now ready with a second one to address this serious problem," said Sewell.

Sewell said a great number of septic systems are substandard, so it is integral that municipalities ensure they are inspected and maintained.

This attitude met opposition during question period, when one man noted he isn't at all surprised that people were appalled at the thought of banning septic systems.

"I'm equally appalled at your readiness to transfer over to municipalities what the province hasn't been able to do," said the Sudbury resident.

Speakers at the Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations' Spring Seminar held April 11 included former Toronto mayor John Sewell (at podium), chairman of the province's Commission on Planning and Development Reform.

The man also informed FOCA members that the University of Waterloo is holding a workshop on May 19 to look at alternatives to septic systems, and that anyone interested should contact the University.

Sewell said U.S. research shows 30 to 40 per cent of private septic systems have failed, and "the cost of putting in replacement systems is horrendous."

In an area near London, where numerous systems have failed, it costs $45,000 per system to replace, he said. In Sudbury, where there is a lot of rock, it costs $155,000.

Another proposal of the commission is that all new marinas have pump-out facilities, "and municipalities should ensure that's the case," said Sewell.

As well, the commission wants to ensure that all natural features — such as wetlands, woodlands and vistas — should be protected from development, and that development patterns should become more intensified.

"We've really spread over the past few years, and I'm not sure we're better for it," said Sewell. "We don't have a handle yet on what kind of development pattern should be allowed in rural areas, but we do recognize the necessity to maintain rural characteristics."

Sewell stressed the importance of official plans to control development, and said all municipalities must determine whether they can provide servicing before any new development is approved.

As an example, he said: "If you're considering a development that's going to necessitate busing kids to school, you've got to look at what that's going to costs, and you've got to be able to afford it."

Sewell was appointed chairman of the commission last June. Ontario's planning act hasn't been reviewed since 1977. The last revisions were made in 1983.

He and fellow commissioners Toby Vigod and George Penfold are expected to present an interim report later this year, and a final report in 1993, in an attempt to introduce new legislation before the current government's term ends.

The commission is scheduled to publish its second draft of goals in the next issue of New Planning News, to be released this month. "We expect to go to a third, and maybe even a fourth draft," he said. To get on the mailing list for this publication, phone 1-800-267-4317.

FOCA also presented its objectives for reform, which include: protecting the environment, ensuring meaningful public participation, and establishing dialogue with permanent residents and other stakeholders.

A case of deja vu

The recent negotiations between the Minden recreation committee and the organizers of the Coby Islanders hockey tournament evokes an unpleasant feeling of deja vu.

It was not that long ago that organizers of another large event, the Ride for Sight, were voicing concerns about the reception they received in Minden.

The end result was the loss of a weekend attraction which drew thousands of people into the area and produced a financial windfall for people in the beleaguered tourism industry.

Now another major event, involving hundreds of hockey players, their friends and family members, is threatened over the cost of renting the facilities at Minden's community centre.

There are obvious differences between the Ride for Sight and the Coby Islander hockey tournament. The hockey tournament is not a major disruption to the town, does not result in damage to personal property and injects money into the economy at a time when it is most needed.

It is the similarities between the two situations which is frightening.

Like the Ride before its relocation to Fenelon Falls, the hockey tournament has been part of the community for several years and is now threatened because organizers feel the municipality is not being supportive enough.

And as was the case with the Ride, there are other communities which would gladly invest some time and money to play host to the tournament to generate some revenue for cash starved businesses.

The recreation committee has made an effort to address some of concerns of tournament organizers and both sides are willing to continue negotiations in an effort to salvage the situation for next year.

Let's hope the two sides can come to an agreement which will keep the tournament in Minden.

Searching for a new Canadian Prime Minister

Black 'n White

by Arthur Black

You feeling a little wierd these days? Kind of antsy and indecisive — frustrated and confused?

Not to fear — Doctor Black is here to offer his world renowned newsprint diagnosis. Just hold this newspaper column against your forehead and count slowly to ten.

Um hmmm. Just as I suspected. You're suffering from Terminal Canadianism. It's highly contagious and it's going around. Most Canuks you meet these days are jittery and distracted — as if they're on their fifteenth cup of coffee.

I don't believe it's dietary. I don't even think it's physical. I think it's political.

Consider the situation Canadians find themselves in these days. Eighty-nine percent of us loathe and despise the federal government and would dearly love to turf it out on its collective keister.

Which is fine as far as it goes — but then what?

Jean Chretien and the Liberals? Get serious.

Audrey McGlaughlin for PM? Audrey who? In the past twelve months, Elvis has been sighted more often than the NDP leader.

Who then — Preston Manning? Mister Rogers meets Howdy Doody? Puhleeze.

That's the Canadian Conundrum in a nutshell. Damned if we do and cursed if we don't. No wonder we're all feeling a little nutzoid. We don't have any prospective leaders we'd trust with the good silver, much less the country.

But you know what, folks? I have the perfect candidate.

Removal of blazes poses danger to hikers

Editor:

The Ganaraska Trail Association has a "blazed" hiking trail extending from the Bruce Trail at Glen Huron to Port Hope. A portion of this trail passed through the "wilderness" section between Victoria Bridge and Moore's Falls. This is a section of the trail that has been designated as part of the National Hiking Trail, one that is planned from coast to coast.

Each year between hiking season (end of October) and the cross country ski weather (beginning of January), several of the blazes are scraped, obliterated or removed in an area about halfway across this section.

As you are aware, the removal of blazes in this rough terrain could create a difficult and dangerous situation for those expecting to follow a marked trail. There is no passable route on either side.

As a non-profit organization, we have no control over who may wish to hike the trail, even though in our newsletters and other publications, we discourage anyone who is not familiar with the terrain to attempt it alone. However, experienced backpackers from other areas, or countries, may not have access to that warning and expect the trail to have the blazes in place. Not knowing anyone has entered the area, we would not be searching for them and a life-threatening situation could arise. I'm sure, whoever has been removing the blazes was not aware of the seriousness of their actions and will take all precautions that no one's life will be placed in jeopardy.

Because of the seriousness of this, I have sent a letter to the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters as well as having notified the OPP and the MNR.

We trust that this year we will find that no blazes have been removed and that Canada can boast a wilderness section in southern Ontario that is too rugged for all but the fittest hikers.

D. Burrus,
President.

Relatives of late Dwight resident wanted for a family reunion

Editor:

I would greatly appreciate it if you would allow me some space in your paper to assist us in our attempt to locate relatives of the late Alexander McMillan Gouldie.

Alexander Gouldie came to Canada from England with his parents and settled in the Dwight, Ontario region. There were ten other brothers and sisters in the family. Alex Jr. (my great-grandfather) settled in Manitoba and his descendants are holding a Gouldie reunion in July. We hope that any relatives still living in your area might contact us as we would like to provide them with the details and extend an invitation to the reunion as well as share some valuable family history. They can write to me c/o 1025 Russell Street, Brandon, Manitoba R7A 5J7, or phone or fax (204) 726-5242.

Thank you for your help in this matter.
Bob Gouldie.

Unfortunately the potential PM is dead

A man who would eat the aforementioned schmoes alive in any televised debate. A man whose honesty, wit and charm would galvanize the Canadian electorate so thoroughly it would make Trudeaumania look like a heat rash. Yessir, my man is the perfect nominee for Prime Minister of Canada.

Well...not quite perfect, actually. Only two small drawbacks stand between mister X and the front door key to 24 Sussex.

Number one, he's American; number two, he's dead.

Will Rogers is the gent I'm talking about. Born in Indian Territory back in 1879, Rogers made his name on the stage with the Ziegfeld Follies doing rope tricks and such. He went on to become a syndicated columnist and then an internationally known film actor. By the 1930's, Will Rogers was a household name. By 1935 he was dead, killed in a plane crash in Alaska.

Rogers would have been the kind of political candidate campaign managers salivate over. He was lean, handsome, adventurous, smart and devilishly funny — often at the expense of politicians.

"American diplomacy is an open book — a chequebook."

On Calvin Coolidge: "He's the first president to discover that what the American people want is to be left alone."

On silver-tongued orator William Jennings Bryan: "He can take a batch of words and scramble them together and leaven them properly with a hunk of oratory and knock the White House doorknob right out of a candidate's hand."

But you didn't have to be a politician to get skewered by Rogers. At a Boston soiree, Rogers, who was part Sioux, was introduced to a snotty dowager who haughtily informed him that she counted the original Pilgrims among her ancestors.

"Well, mu folks didn't come over on the Mayflower" drawled Rogers, "but they were there to meet the boat."

Did he ever think of running for President when he was alive? Absolutely not. "I not only `don't choose to run' for President" said Rogers, "I don't even want to leave a loophole in case I am drafted, so I won't `choose.' I will say `won't run' no matter how badly the country may need a comedian by that time."

Darts and laurels for day care reform

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Critics and supporters of the Ontario government's proposed child care reform gathered in Lindsay last Wednesday to present their concerns to a provincial panel.

The public meeting, held at the Admiral Inn, was one of 24 being held in Ontario so the public can comment on a consultation paper on child care reform.

In the paper, the government states that its four principles of reform are: quality as the cornerstone of the child care system; child care services must be affordable; child care services must be accessible; and the child care system must be soundly managed.

Ontario's NDP government has come out in support of non-profit child care operations and will encourage commercial, for-profit day care centres to convert to non-profit status.

At last Wednesday's meeting, commercial day care operators from Durham and Peterborough condemned the government's plan to eliminate for-profit centres in favour of non-profit.

They said it will cost Ontario taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars to replace the 30,000 day care spaces currently provided by for-profit centres.

The government has said it supports non-profit centres because they are more accountable and ensure a higher quality of care.

Commercial operators reject those arguments. By enforcing day care legislation and maintaining strict licensing regulations, they say commercial operators will have to maintain high standards or risk having their license pulled by the ministry of community and social services.

The concerns of rural parents who require day care were also discussed at last Wednesday's meeting. People representing agricultural communities said farming families need accessible day care service on short notice during the busy season from May to October, but do not require much day care during the winter.

Some day care operators condemn government plan to eliminate for-profit centres.

They suggested some sort of flexible day care service which would meet the needs of rural communities.

There was also a lot of support for the role played by resource centres in the delivery of child care services.

Resource centres, like the ones operated in the villages of Haliburton and Minden by CHACE, give support to parents and caregivers by operating toy libraries, offering a place for caregivers and children to meet and play with other caregivers and children, and providing educational support.

In addition to the reaction by commercial operators to the government's attitude toward for-profit day care, another controversial aspect of the reform is the question of who should be responsible for managing child care.

Currently all three levels of government — federal, provincial and municipal — are responsible for funding child care services in Ontario. During the reform process, the government wants to clearly define the responsibilities of each level of government.

Proposed changes to Labour Relations Act to be discussed

The provincial government's controversial proposed changes to the Labour Relations Act will be the topic of discussion at a special meeting next Tuesday, April 21.

Catherine Swift, the senior vice-president of provincial affairs for the Canadian Federation of Independent Business, will be addressing the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce at the Haliburton Legion at 7 p.m.

Swift will be discussing issues related to Ontario's proposed changes to labour legislation in a speech entitled "A Question of Balance: Small Business and the Ontario NDP Government."

The changes being considered by the government would make it easier for employees in to the province to unionize and would prohibit owners from using replacement workers in a strike situation.

The changes have been loudly criticized by business leaders in the province who fear the amended Act would tip the balance of labour relations in favour or organized unions and would discourage companies from investing in the province.

The meeting is being co-sponsored by the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce and the Business Improvement Areas in Minden and Haliburton. If you require further information about next week's meeting contact Chamber member Andy Salvatori in Haliburton at 457-2100.

There is no charge for attending the meeting.

Lutterworth opposes potential downloading of OPP services

by Susan Grober

News briefs

The following matters were discussed during last Thursday's Lutterworth council meeting.

OPP costs

Council supports a resolution passed by the Township of Orillia which states that responsibility for police services should not be passed from the province to rural municipalities in Ontario.

Orillia's resolution was made in response to a brief to the Ontario Solicitor General by the Ontario Association of Police Services Boards, where the association suggested the cost of OPP services should be transferred to the municipal level.

At present, rural areas with small populations, such as Haliburton County, are not charged for the police coverage provided by the OPP.

Other municipalities either have their own police forces, or pay the OPP on a contract basis to provide coverage.

Recently, some municipal politicians in the province have said all municipalities should be required to pay for police services.

However, Orillia's resolution notes "the primary function of the Ontario Provincial Police is to enforce provincial statutes... the cost of policing in Ontario is quite clearly a provincial responsibility, and should be paid for by the province."

Lutterworth council unanimously agreed to support the resolution. Deputy-Reeve Jim McMahon said there is a growing trend of downloading provincial services onto municipalities

McMahon noted that he has always been against such initiatives as community policing, where municipalities are asked to get involved in police services.

"They're going to get all these community policings in place, and at the end of the year we're going to get a bill," McMahon predicted. "I can see it coming now."

Orillia's resolution has been circulated to the Association of Municipalities of Ontario (AMO), and to all non-urban municipalities in Ontario for each council's consideration.

Earlier this month, Minden and Stanhope councils passed similar resolutions supporting Orillia township's position.

Good news, good roads

The township's roads crew got a pat on the back from council for a job well done.

Roads Committee Chairman Bill Valentine noted there haven't been any complaints about the township's roads system of late.

"Kevin's a good man," Valentine said of Roads Superintendent Kevin Hill. "We've got a really good crew, and our equipment is getting better."

Of the roads department, Valentine said area property owners "know they're doing the best they can, so they don't complain."

Earlier in the meeting, the roads superintendent had his own kudos for council.

During his regular report, Hill said one of the township's employees wants to take some time off. Although the employee has not worked long enough to be eligible for full vacation time yet, Personnel Committee Chairman Lisa Mercer was asked for assistance.

The employee's time spent on the job so far was worked out, and it was determined that he's eligible to take four days off in May.

Reeve Cam Ecclestone asked Hill whether the amount of time off is satisfactory to the employee, and Hill responded that it is.

"I'm glad you find your council so co-operative," said Ecclestone.

"Yes, things run smoothly here," responded Hill.

Survey shows many septic systems are substandard

During a 1989 survey of septic systems on Canning and Kushog Lakes by the Ministry of the Environment, more than half of the systems tested were found to be either seriously substandard or were discharging washwater or solid waste onto the ground surface.

A report on the survey was released by the ministry in February.

Of the 286 private sewage disposal systems inspected on Canning lake during the summer of 1989, 89 (31 per cent), were classified as seriously substandard; 87 systems, (31 per cent), were unsatisfactory due to the improper disposal of solid waste or washwater; and 12 systems (4 per cent), were unclassified by the survey crew at the end of the survey.

As of December 31, 1989, 25 malfunctioning systems had been corrected and 41 owners had signed agreements to complete corrections during the construction season of 1990.

There were 544 private sewage disposal systems inspected on Kushog Lake during the summer of 1989. Of these, 165 (30 per cent), were classified as seriously substandard; 167 (30.5 per cent), were unsatisfactory due to the improper disposal of solid waste or washwater; and 27 systems (5 per cent), were unclassified by the survey crew at the end of the survey.

As of December 31, 1989, 31 malfunctioning systems had been corrected and 64 owners had signed agreements to complete corrections during the construction season of 1990.

Ministry personnel will contact owners of seriously substandard sewage systems. The owners will be informed of their sewage problems so they may take action before a more serious problem develops.

Owners with malfunctioning sewage systems will continue to be contacted to ensure a firm commitment for correction.

Owners who are unwilling, within a reasonable time frame, to co-operate with abatement efforts will have enforcement action initiated against them.

Wolves looking for Minden den

by Oliver Greer

The Central Ontario Wolves will be on the prowl during next year's hockey season.

Kelly Doyle, President of the Wolves organization, says that the coaching committee will begin meeting in two weeks, and tryouts for the teams will take place in Lindsay sometime during August.

The nine teams, ranging from minor novice to major midget, will be composed of players from 21 hockey centres throughout central Ontario, including the Minden and Haliburton areas.

They will compete in the triple A division of the Ontario Minor Hockey Association (OMHA) against teams from large communities such as Oshawa and Toronto.

When asked if the Wolves, which draw players from many different communities, can achieve the same kind of unity and success as a team from a single large centre, Doyle expressed hope that after the first year the players would gel into strong united teams capable of competing with any large centre.

The distances that players would have to travel to practices and home games is a potential problem, but changes will

Council supports club's bid for funding

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Snowmobiling injected $13 million into local economy this year, states HCSA report

Minden council is supporting the local snowmobile club's application for funding from the Ministry of Tourism and Recreation.

At their most recent meeting, councillors unanimously passed a resolution which states that: "Council supports the application from the Haliburton County Snowmobile Association (HCSA) to the Ministry of Tourism and Recreation for capital equipment purchases and further that the other municipalities within the County of Haliburton are urged to support this application as well."

The resolution was proposed after council read a report from the HCSA about its grooming activities for the 1991/92 snowmobile season.

The association, which is 21 years old, has become the largest snowmobile club in the world.

This year it groomed its 640-kilometre trail network with $500,000 worth of equipment from the second week of December until the last full week in March.

In the report, HCSA president Brian Watts says snowmobiling injected $13 million into the local economy this winter at a time when most tourism-related industries are suffering.

According to Bill Wilson, the HCSA equipment coordinator, the association needs two additional pieces of grooming equipment to keep up with the demand of the trail system.

Watts says it's time the Ministry of Tourism and Recreation recognizes the importance of snowmobiling to the provincial economy and provides capital funding for the purchase of grooming equipment.

be made to the teams' home arenas to accommodate the bulk of the players from each team.

Because each team's home games will be rotated around the area, Doyle also expressed concern that the teams may have trouble building a solid base of loyal fans and community support.

During the initial season, most of the regular fans will be parents, but Doyle feels that once the communities see the high calibre of hockey that the wolves will be playing, any concerns about attendance should disappear.

One other concern is that the Wolves will damage existing hockey programs by drawing the best players away from the teams

In response, Doyle stated that this was definitely not the Wolves objective and would be watched very closely during the upcoming season.

If it appears that other teams are being affected, the format will be altered to accommodate the local teams. He also said that in other areas where this type of team has been initiated, hockey enrollment has increased.

On average, each player who leaves a local team to play triple A hockey is replaced by two new players.

Doyle hopes that each of the nine Wolves teams will play at least one game in Minden in order to raise interest and give any players from the area a chance to play in front of the home town crowd.

No objections to water ski club

by Susan Grober

Lutterworth Council has no objection to the proposed relocation of the Water Ski Slalom Course on Davis Lake.

During its meeting last Thursday, council passed a motion stating it doesn't object, provided the plan is approved by the Ministry of Natural Resources and the Ontario Provincial Police, and provided property owners on that end of the lake have no objections.

According to a letter from David Howe of the Davis Lake Ski Club, approval from the municipality is necessary for its application to relocate the water ski course further from shore, in compliance with new Federal Boating legislation.

"We have been enjoying slalom course water skiing on Davis Lake for 25 years," reads Howe's letter. "Last year in consultation with MNR, we had our first course relocation. Subsequently on August 28, 1991 new Federal legislation was passed which has indirectly necessitated another course relocation further from shore."

In his letter, Howe referred to Claire Hopkins, who has previously objected to the club's activity. In response, Howe noted that Hopkins has since written to the ministry and withdrawn all of his objections.

Howe also clarified some of Hopkins' misconceptions of the club. Howe said it is not a water ski school, and that the course is open to all cottagers on Davis Lake, free of charge

"It is our hope that this will be the final slalom course relocation," wrote Howe. "MNR has agreed in principle to this re-positioning and will be issuing a Land Use Permit for our activity, but requested that you be advised given the facts that the township owns the 66′ right-of-way and the boat ramp at the north end of the bay."

However, Howe noted the club will not be using the ramp or the 66′ area in its activity, other than through the normal activity generated from the docks of existing cottagers.

CHACE supports reform care to residents as part of its social service department. Last Wednesday, representatives from Durham day care services told the provincial committee members that responsibility for managing day care should be given to municipalities.

Locally, Snowdon council has passed a resolution stating its belief that child care should remain in the private sector and be the responsibility of families. Council does not want the province to take any action toward reform which will result in increased bureaucracy or increased taxation.

The County of Haliburton Agency for Child Enrichment (CHACE) made a presentation last Wednesday supporting the direction taken by the province with regard to child care reform.

CHACE is a non-profit agency which operates two resource centres, a licensed day care centre in Minden and a licensed private home day care network.

Although CHACE supports many of the government's proposed reforms, the agency is concerned that the government seems to have ignored the vital role played by parents in providing day care.

It is also concerned about the possibility of universal provincial funding and believes that limited government money should be directed to those families which need it most.

In addition to last Wednesday's meeting, a series of local focus groups are being organized to allow residents more opportunity to learn about, and comment on, the proposed changes to child care in the province.

MNR fishing survey provides economic and biological information

Submitted

A preliminary report released recently by the Ministry of Natural Resources indicates that in 1990 nearly two million anglers spent more than $3 billion in Ontario on boating, camping and fishing equipment, travel and lodging, meals, guides, licence fees and incidentals, not to mention cabins, cottages and land.

Data collected in 1991 and now being analyzed show that most of that expenditure (89 per cent) is made by Ontario residents. In 1990, nearly one in five Ontario residents over age 18, fished in the province.

Walleye was the number one catch: 27 million of the total 146 million fish caught that year.

However, both residents and visitors kept less than half their catch.

The 1990 Survey of Recreational Fishing in Ontario provides economic and biological information that enables fisheries resource manager to better assess government policies related to recreational fisheries.

Survey results and analyses will be released starting later this month.

The balance of the seven reports on the survey will be released through 1992 and into 1993.

Comments and inquiries about the survey may be directed to Recreational Fishing in Ontario 1990, Client Services Section, Fisheries Policy Branch, Ministry of Natural Resources, 90 Sheppard Avenue East, 5th Floor, North York, Ontario M2N 3A1, telephone (416) 314-1130.

Minden opposes plan to transfer roads

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

The following issues were discussed at the April 9 meeting of Anson, Hindon and Minden council.

Highway changes opposed

Council passed a resolution opposing a plan by the provincial transportation ministry to trade roads with local municipalities.

One of the options being considered would see Highways 121 and 649 from Bobcaygeon to Minden transferred to the road systems of the counties of Haliburton and Victoria.

The province has proposed the transfer because it already maintains a major north-south access with Highway 35.

It wants to develop an east-west corridor by accepting roads currently in the municipal system.

But Minden councillors oppose the idea of the province relinquishing Highways 121 and 649.

They passed a resolution that: "The county engineer is to be advised that the council of the townships of Anson, Hindon and Minden is opposed to the proposal being considered to change Highway 649 and 121 from Bobcaygeon to Minden, as this proposal would downgrade access routes into Minden and the County of Haliburton."

News briefs

Fireworks may return to Minden

Minden council is considering whether or not to sponsor a fireworks display to celebrate Canada Day this year.

The members of the village Business Improvement Area (BIA) have asked that the use of fireworks, which was suspended last year, be re-instated.

According to councillor Jean Anthon, who serves as council liaison with the BIA, the business owners are willing to contribute financially to the cost of the fireworks.

Reeve Bern Berry said the task of organizing a fireworks display is neither easy nor cheap.

Although the township has had assistance from local service clubs with the cost of past displays, Berry said this is the first time the BIA has offered to help.

He said the only reason council decided to forego a fireworks display last Canada Day was to control costs to keep the municipal budget in line.

This year, however, "it's a new council and it's open for discussion," said Berry.

Cost of recycling increases

The costs involved with Minden's recycling program have increased, now that the municipality is being charged a tipping for the material being collected.

The municipality maintains a recycling depot at the Scotch Line landfill site where residents can drop off cans, bottles and newspaper.

The municipality then pays Muskoka Containerized Services, which owns the bin, to exchange full bins for empty ones. The full bin is taken to a recycling centre.

When the municipality started the program it was paid for the value of the material collected, although the amount was less than the cost of the transporting the bins.

Now however, instead of being paid for the recyclable material, the municipality is being charged a tipping fee for glass and paper in addition to the transportation cost. As well, the municipality is not being paid for cans.

In 1991, the recycling program cost Minden about $4,800. With the introduction of tipping fees the estimated cost of the recycling program for 1992 is $8,000.

The reason the municipality is no longer being paid for the material which is recycled is because the supply of such material across the province has outstripped demand.

'Granny flat' initiative could create problems

by Susan Grober

Lutterworth Council is wary of a pilot project to develop granny flats across the country.

According to a letter from county planner Mark Stagg, the Canadian Mortgage and Housing Corporation (CMHC) plans to implement the initiative over the next few years. The manager of Peterborough's CMHC office contacted Stagg, and asked that he bring this to the attention of the municipalities for "further action as you may decide."

The corporation intends to develop approximately 100 granny flats across Canada as a demonstration project. A granny flat is a self-contained small residence placed on the same property as a principle residence, and is usually hooked onto its water supply and sewage disposal facilities.

"It is understood that the occupant(s) of the granny flat do not have to be related to the owner/occupant of the principle residence but are selected on a basis of need and qualification," explained Stagg.

The second residence would have to conform to the site conditions of the local zoning bylaw. And it is necessary that the municipality have a provision in its zoning bylaw regarding the temporary use of land, buildings and structures.

Stagg has been advised that one or two granny flats will be developed in the corporation's Peterborough area, and said any municipality which wants to be considered for the initiative can contact the Peterborough office for further information.

"With 25 per cent of its permanent population aged 65 or more, the County of Haliburton would certainly be a good area in which development of the kind proposed might be encouraged," said Stagg. "To the extent the program assists older people to live and remain in the community for a longer period, the concept has both social and economic advantages. Furthermore, if the concept gains good acceptance then it could assist in the county's ability to attract more people to come and live here."

Lutterworth councillors expressed a number of concerns while discussing the matter during last Thursday's council meeting.

"I don't like that the person doesn't have to be related," said Maurice Boyd, who wondered what type of zoning changes would be necessary to allow for a granny flat.

Boyd said it would be hard to control who would live in the flats.

"Are we opening up a can of worms?" asked Lisa Mercer, who said she has the same concerns expressed by Boyd.

Mercer said the initiative

Funny Bunnies

Since the plan to grow Christmas trees on Lutterworth Township's industrial park site has proven to be impractical, Lutterworth Councillors Lisa Mercer and Maurice Boyd decided to get a jump on Easter by considering a more profitable suggestion to sell Easter eggs instead.

Stanhope councillors like granny flat idea seems like it would benefit senior citizens, but not if you can't control who lives in the flats.

"Sure, it would be all right if you could restrict it to your parents, but you can't."

Boyd said Midland already has a bylaw in place which allows for granny flats.

He has friends in Midland whose parents live in a separate home on the same property, connected by a breezeway.

"But they're on sewers," said Boyd. "That's a lot different from a septic system. I just can't see the Health Unit going for this."

"So at this point in time, we're not going to go for it," concluded Reeve Cam Ecclestone.

Meanwhile, when Stanhope council considered the matter during its last meeting, the councillors were favourable to the project, although they questioned whether an application by Stanhope would be considered if only one or two granny flats will be approved in the area served by the Peterborough office.

Stanhope Deputy-Reeve Eleanor Harrison said: "We might as well show an interest and see where that takes us. We would be foolish to ignore it."

Good news from Ford & Frontier Motors

FORD INVESTS IN CANADA

Oakville, Ont., April 13 – An investment of more than $2 billion to build a new minivan in Oakville and new engines in Windsor was announced today by Kenneth W. Harrigan, chairman and chief executive officer of Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited.

"These investments – the largest in our 88-year history – will provide us with technologically-advanced, world-mandate products that will strengthen our competitive position through the 1990s and into the new century," Harrigan said.

"The best news is that, as a result of this vote of confidence in our Canadian work force, we believe that we can provide stability of employment at our Canadian plants at a time when the global automobile industry is undergoing a major restructuring," he continued.

More than $1 billion will be spent at the Oakville Assembly Plant, including $439 million for a high-tech paint facility just completed, to retool and re-equip the plant as the sole source for a new multi-purpose minivan which will compete in the fastest-growing segment in North America. Production is expected to begin in late 1993.

At Windsor, more than $1 billion will be spent to rebuild and equip Windsor Engine Plant Two, which was closed in December, 1990, to produce a new family of truck engines beginning in 1995. Windsor Engine Plant One would be closed in 1996 when the truck engine currently built there is phased out.

Hourly employment at Windsor, following these actions and the opening of the new Windsor Aluminum Plant now under construction, would be stabilized at this present level of 3,200.

In November, 1993, one shift would be discontinued at the Ontario Truck Plant but the 700 employees affected would be transferred to the adjacent Oakville Assembly Plant for production of the new minivan. Another 400 employees would be required, to be met by offering jobs to Ford employees on indefinite layoff at other Ontario locations.

The reduction of one shift comes as a result of the need to consolidate production on F-Series trucks exceeding a GVW of 8,500 pounds into a single plant – Kentucky Truck Plant, which produces medium and heavy trucks. This would allow maximum utilization of that facility and would improve production efficiencies throughout the company's North American light truck production system.

Harrigan said Ford of Canada's employment at the two Oakville plants, after the minivan launch, would be about 400 higher than the 3,800 hourly employees currently.

"Both of these programs, at Oakville and Windsor, will require the largest and most intensive training programs ever undertaken by the company, thereby ensuring that our employees receive the new skills required for the advanced technologies of the future," he said.

"I want to pay tribute to the men and women of Ford of Canada whose dedication to quality and cost effectiveness will continue to make us formidable competitors in the years ahead," Harrigan said.

Haliburton Village 457-2022

Spring brings many new arrivals in the Highlands, none the least of which is the opening of new or expanded businesses. Such was the case this past weekend in Haliburton Village when Emmerson Lumber Ltd. opened its new plumbing division. Located across the street from the lumber yard on Maple Street, the store features a complete line of plumbing supplies and fixtures. Store manager Gord Divell, left, and owner Kim Emmerson, right, held the ribbon as Dysart Reeve Chris Hodgson, above, cuts the ribbon to mark the official opening. A few minutes later, the reeve's scissor skills were put to use again as he snipped the ribbon at the new Kennedy Sport and Tackle outlet, located at the rear of the Emmerson Plumbing building. Store manager Bill Findlay and owner Cheryl Kennedy assisted Hodgson with this duty. "I'm pleased to see this new investment in the community taking place," the reeve commented.

Manpower drawn from Minden and Coboconk OPP detachments

Local officers provide security for provincial budget

Minden's OPP detachment is one of 21 in the province which is providing manpower to provide security for the Ontario government's budget.

According to a release from the opposition Liberal Party, Premier Bob Rae's NDP government is spending $151,000 to bring 30 police officers to Toronto for more than one month to provide security for the budget.

Alvin Curling, the Liberal's Solicitor General critic, attacked the government's plan during question period at Queen's Park.

"Given the acute policing shortage in many Ontario communities, and given the government's current fiscal crisis, can the Solicitor General explain why he feels it is necessary to bring these officers from all over Ontario and put them up at the posh Sutton Place Hotel?" Curling asked during question period.

Curling said the officers were ordered to drive to Toronto, in their cruisers, from as far away as Kenora.

"The Auroa detachment has been ordered to send three officers, even though police calls in the area are up 50 per cent and the detachment is ten officers below full strength," Curling said.

According to a list provided by the Liberal Party, the OPP detachments in Minden and Coboconk are each sending one officer to help provide budget security in Toronto, at an average cost of $6,300 per officer which includes accommodation, travel, food and overtime wages.

"This is a waste of taxpayers' money and it is unfair for the government to steal these officers from their home communities at a time when rural police detachments are strained to the breaking point by NDP cutbacks," Curling said.

In response, the government has said it's budget security measures are no different than what has been done in the past.

Brent Sisson, 43, recently of the Pontypool area has been sentenced to one year in jail after pleading guilty to defrauding the public.

Sisson had been soliciting funds for a publication known as the Child Safety Magazine.

Businesses were being sold advertising space in this magazine that was to be placed free of charge in areas frequented by the public.

The money was collected but no effort made to produce the magazine.

Businesses are reminded to use caution when approached by anyone soliciting funds.

Ensure for yourself the identity of the salesperson and the credibility of the company they represent.

If you have any doubts at all contact the local police, before handing out your money.

Bus Safety

Good luck and not good management prevented a school age child from being struck by a pick-up truck during the afternoon bus run on Tuesday, April 7.

The driver of the bus was stopped, with lights flashing, and stop arm extended, and the child was walking in front of the bus approaching the centre line when a pick-up truck passed the bus from the rear.

Luckily the driver of this vehicle saw the child at the last moment and stopped.

Drivers are reminded that they must stop and remain stopped until the stop arm is retracted and the alternating lights deactivated before they pass.

Not only is there a heavy fine and demerit point involved, but the lives of the children riding the bus are at stake.

Charged Mischief

Raymond Dupuis, 37, of Scarborough has been charged with mischief and possession of a narcotic after police called to an incident in the Dorset area on April 6. A vehicle window was smashed and a quantity of marijuana found.

Provincial parks get face-lift, new fee structure

Ontario's provincial parks will open for the 1992 season with revitalized facilities, a new fee structure and an expanded recycling program.

Last year MNR spent $10 million revitalizing provincial parks to provide more opportunities for all Ontarians to enjoy their natural features. In addition, the ministry continued to build on its commitment to making parks more accessible for persons with physical disabilities.

Wheelchair accessible trails were constructed at Awenda and presqu'ile parks. In addition, many comfort stations and park offices were renovated.

"In 1991, there were more than eight million visitors to our parks. That number broke all attendance records," said Natural Resources Minister Bud Wildman. "I encourage all Ontarians to take advantage of the many recreational opportunities provided in our parks."

MNR revises park fees annually to remain competitive with other park agencies and to recover a more equitable portion of park operating costs from park users. This in line with the strategy of the government and the ministry to have users pay a greater share of the costs of services.

The fee increases vary depending on the service, but most increases range from 25 cents to $2.25. The daily vehicle permit fee is $6.00 (25-cent increase); summer vehicle permit $36.50 ($1.50); regular camping site with electricity $16.50 (75 cents).

In some of the more highly valued parks, fees for camping have increased a bit more than in others to reflect the different level of service available. Many of these parks also protect some of the most significant natural features in the parks system. The fee for a campsite with electricity in these parks will be $18.00 ($2.25 increase); a site in a park with showers will cost $15.25 and a site in a park without showers will cost $13.75 - an increase of $2.00 in both cases.

The interior camping fee has been increased by $1.00 to $4.25 to bring it in line with other fee increases over the past 10 years.

To bring senior citizens' fees more into line with those charged by other private and public campgrounds, senior citizens will be charged half-rate for every day of the week.

The campsite reservation fee of $4.50 remains the same, but now this processing fee is non-refundable if reservations are cancelled.

MNR continues its commitment to making parks more accessible to persons with physical disabilities. To encourage greater use of parks by people who are mobility and visually impaired, the ministry has reduced camping and day-use fees by 50 per cent. Up until this year, disabled persons — were charged full fees.

Through the parks recycling program, MNR continues to build on its commit-

Wetlands are for the birds

Reflections

by David Suzuki

"Think global, act local" is a popular ecological slogan and nothing illustrates its importance better than shorebirds.

As a biologist, my great passions in life have been insects and fish, but working on a program called Connecting Flights for The Nature of Things (which aired March 18), I had to watch birds.

At one point, we drove south of Vancouver through the most densely populated part of British Columbia, past urban sprawl, shopping malls, golf courses and farmers' fields. And there in ocean mudflats formed at the mouth of the Fraser River, was an incredible biological spectacle, tens of thousands of migratory shorebirds within sight of the airport.

Those birds were drawn to that specific feeding ground at just that time of year, by a genetic clock set through thousands of years of natural selection and evolution. They make a mockery of our political borders.

Every spring and fall, hundreds of thousands of shorebirds pass by and we scarcely notice them. They come in huge clouds, which are spine-tingling in the way they skim the water, then explode toward the skies in perfect unison in a kind of celestial cartwheel.

The 67 species that nest in Canada include sandpipers, plovers and curlews. But it's absurd to call them Canadian birds when they travel all the way from the Arctic tundra to South American wetlands and back in a year.

For most species that covers at least 12,000 kilometres and many go more than 25,000. For some shorebirds, the flight from eastern North America to northern South America is made in 40 to 60 hours nonstop.

This amazing globe trotting story begins when dozens of species of shorebirds arrive for the brief Arctic summer. They have to recover their energy and expend more in courtship, egg production and chick rearing. What makes this incredible journey worthwhile is biological opportunity - widespread nesting sights with little competition and an explosion of food, especially insects.

So the birds can load up with nutrition and fat, lay eggs and get their young started, then take off for a destination on the other side of the planet.

During their long stretches of flying, they burn up their fat reserves and then they have to find food or die.

Strategically placed along their routes are critical sites where the birds can find abundant energy-rich food. For example, along the rich mud deposits of the Bay of Fundy, shorebirds find and consume an amphipod called corophium at the staggering rate of 40 a minute per bird for hours each day.

On the way north in May, shorebird arrival at Delaware Bay in New Jersey coincides precisely with horseshoe crabs coming ashore to lay their eggs. Laying 50,000 eggs, each female contributes to a rich soup of protoplasm for the birds to dine on.

These feeding grounds are irreplaceable, if they are developed, drained or poisoned, the birds lack biological flexibility to find new places or switch sources of nutrition. As the different species of shorebirds fly south, they fan out across wintering grounds that extend from Central America all the way to Tierra del Fuego.

In Surinam, for example, hundreds of thousands of shorebirds over-winter on mudflats that have flowed north from the Amazon River and had their origins in the Andes mountains. Scientists with the Canadian Wildlife Service have played a key role in following the path of the birds, and mapping the range of their wintering grounds.

Not surprisingly, shorebirds run a gauntlet of human demands - sport and food hunters, farm pesticides, industrial toxins, urban sprawl and development - that are constantly squeezing in on critical sites.

They depend on wetlands such as streams, marshes, lagoons

All 13 million of you

Stand up and take a bow

Imagine a bouquet of 13 million roses - each one representing one volunteer at work in communities across Canada. National Volunteer Week 1992, between April 26 and May 2, is a time to pay tribute to these volunteers who support those in need.

The rose we, as Canadians, can offer to our volunteers is only a symbol of our gratitude. It can be an expression of our thanks for the countless hours volunteers contribute to building a more caring and compassionate Canada.

A rose for every one of the 13 million volunteers who choose voluntarism as part of their lifestyle. A rose for the spirit of caring and concern for others - a spirit that defines the way of life in Canada.

Taking the time to assist other citizens with reading and writing, or getting together to clean up our environment, are examples of how volunteers contribute to the development of society.

National Volunteer Week offers a special time for us to reflect upon the vital role that volunteers play in Canadian society.

Provincial Parks ready to open

ment to protecting the environment and maintaining the parks for the enjoyment of visitors.

This year the number of parks with recycling programs will expand to 102 from 26 in 1990. This makes the Ontario Provincial Parks Recycling Program one of the largest programs of its kind in North America.

In 1993, Ontario will celebrate its provincial parks centennial in conjunction with Algonquin Park's 100th anniversary.

Information about parks facilities, fees and the campsite reservation service is contained in the 1992 Ontario Provincial Parks Guide, available at provincial parks, MNR district offices, Ontario Travel Information Centres, and the Natural Resources Information Centre, Room M1-73, Macdonald Block, 900 Bay Street, Toronto, M7A 2C1, telephone (416) 314-1717. Shorebirds provide connection with locations around the world and estuaries which have been radically changed by human activity at the rate of an acre a minute ever since the arrival of Europeans in this hemisphere. Only 50 percent of North America's original wetlands remain and the decline and even extinction of shorebird species has been alarming.

So in 1985, the Western Hemisphere Shorebird Reserve Network (P.O. Box 936 Manomet, MA 02345, USA), a coalition presently of six countries, was set up to identify and protect critical sites for shorebirds. They still have a long way to go.

For example, only one percent of the land around Boundary Bay, a site of global significance, is protected. And James Bay, a very crucial area is threatened by Quebec's massive hydro-electric dams. But WHSRN is an important beginning that informs us of the global significance of the local battles.

Standing on the mudflats of Boundary Bay surrounded by tens of thousands of shorebirds feeding and flying, I had a profoundly spiritual sense of connectedness with distant places around the globe.

Bilingual sign policy raises concerns

Drainville Diary
A report from Queen's Park
With Dennis Drainville, MPP

Over the past few weeks, many of you have contacted my office and expressed dissatisfaction with stories about the installation of bilingual signs along some provincial highways. There is some confusion about the issue and I would like to take the time now to provide some background.

In 1986, all three parties in the Ontario Legislature, unanimously passed the French Language Services Act. The Act recognizes the importance of providing provincial (not municipal) government services in French in certain designated areas of the province. Those areas are where ten per cent of the population is French speaking.

Over the past few years, as part of providing French language services, the Ontario Ministry of Transportation has been installing bilingual highway signs only on the provincial highways in these designated areas. Some of those areas where the signs are in place include Welland, Port Colborne and Windsor, as well as large parts of northern Ontario. Victoria-Haliburton is not a designated area and there will be no changes to highway signs here.

The costs of changing the signs is part of the Ministry's operating budget ($4 million for signs) and has been staggered over a number of years. Already, 70 per cent of the signs have been changed over. To date there has not been any additional cost to the Ministry to install bilingual signs over English-only signs. This is because they have been installed only as the signs needed to be replaced anyway, i.e. replacing old, dilapidated or damaged signs.

By continuing to provide government services in the French language in French speaking areas (there are over half a million French speaking Ontarians), we are recognising the contribution of the cultural heritage of Franco-Ontarians, a large and historically important part of our diverse population.

If you have further concerns or questions, they can be referred directly to:

Dorset acid rain report

The following report on precipitation events was recorded at the Ministry of Environment acid rain testing station in Dorset and compiled by Environment Canada.

This report covers the period of April 5 to 11, 1992.

April 7, 1 mm of rain fell with a pH level of 3.8. The airpath was from Michigan/Northern Indiana.

April 10, 15 cm of snow fell with a pH level of 5.0. The airpath was from Southern Ontario/Lake Huron.

Environmental damage to lakes and streams is usually observed in sensitive areas regularly receiving precipitation with ph less than 4.7. Ph readings less than 4.0 are serious.

"My daughter means the world to me."

That's why I like to take her places and show her new things. I'm trying to teach her that people are basically the same. That way, she can learn to be considerate of others.

I also try to teach her by being a good example. I recently preplanned funeral services. That way she won't have to worry about making those arrangements for me.

Preplanning is considerate, and it's just one way I can show her how much I love her.

Planting an idea to last a lifetime

23,000,000 seedlings and you

Natural Resources Minister Bud Wildman has asked for public support in planting up to 23 million additional tree seedlings which will be made available to eligible individuals, groups and organizations this spring.

"The Ministry of Natural Resources (MNR) cannot afford to plant all the tree seedlings available to its silviculture program this year," Wildman said. "Therefore, the ministry is teaming up with the Ontario Forestry Association (OFA) to seek the support of the public to assist us in planting as many of these trees as possible through a provincewide initiative that we are calling Operation Tree Plant.

"We are asking landowners, groups, associations, municipalities, First Nations and individuals from across Ontario to rally in support of this initiative. Trees are important to our natural environment and this is an effective way for Ontarians to improve the environment while helping to save seedlings that otherwise might have to be destroyed," said Wildman.

"While we remain committed to pursuing our sustainable forestry program and to ensuring the long-term health of Ontario's forests, difficult financial times call for creative solutions to meet the public's expectations that MNR will continue to be a good environmental and financial manager," Wildman added.

"I'm pleased that the OFA and MNR are working together on this campaign," said Jim Coats, executive vice-president of the OFA. "This is a great opportunity to inform the people of Ontario about the benefits of planting trees as well as to educate them about the need to replant idle rural lands."

This year MNR will make available to eligible members of the public a total of up to 35 million tree seedlings, an increase of approximately 23 million from previous years. Normally, the ministry offers about 12 million tree seedlings to the public each year through sales at local MNR offices and to Ontario's conservation authorities.

To promote additional planting on private and Crown lands, MNR will distribute the seedlings on behalf of the OFA.

To qualify, customers must buy a minimum of 300 seedlings at a cost of 10 cents per seedling plus a handling charge and tax. The ministry will then provide additional seedlings at no extra cost. The trees must be planted on appropriate sites at least two hectares in size and all sites must be approved by MNR. This initiative was designed - and its eligibility criteria set - so as to minimize impacts on private growers.

By charging the public a nominal fee for the first 300 seedlings, about $5.75 million, while maintaining traditional revenues from seedling sales.

The additional seedlings being made available this year cannot be stored in provincial nurseries for later use, as storage would make them unsuitable for successful planting. In addition, the seedlings must be refrigerated during shipping and high costs rule out the option of sending the seedlings to other provinces or countries.

As part of the initiative, local MNR offices will be providing complete details on who can get involved in planting trees, how to select appropriate sites and species, how to plant, how to order trees and the available Crown land planting areas.

Specifically, MNR staff are approaching such organizations as municipalities, rural land and woodlot owners, conservation authorities, environmental and naturalist groups, agricultural and cottaging associations and community and service groups, and will step up their campaign as the spring planting season draws nearer.

Persons or groups interested in obtaining tree seedlings or requiring further information, should contact their local Ministry of Natural Resources district office.

Program encourages youth exchange visits

Report from Ottawa

from the office of Bill Scott, MP

The Federal riding of Victoria-Haliburton has been twinned with the riding of Laurentides for Voyageurs Canada 92, Bill Scott M.P., announced today.

Voyageurs Canada 92 is a youth travel exchange program which provides an opportunity for young Canadians, age 16 to 21, to visit different regions of Canada, and to host young people from other regions. Up to 125 young people from Victoria-Haliburton will be taking part in the program.

This is a joint program between the Department of the Secretary of State and Canada's 295 Members of Parliament in partnership with Air Canada. It will give young Canadians the opportunity to travel free to different regions of Canada to learn more about their country, their communities and their fellow citizens.

Voyageurs Canada is open to Canadian citizens and landed immigrants. Applicants must fill out an application and submit it to the Local Organizing Committee, in care of my constituency office, by May 8.

Individuals and groups of up to nine people can apply to the program. Groups must include a responsible adult, age 25 or older, who will be the Group Supervisor. Candidate groups must find an organization in their community to support their application and be their sponsor. Group applicants must suggest ways they will host Voyageurs from our twin riding.

Community groups can help make Voyageurs Canada 92 a success in Victoria-Haliburton by helping a group of young people organize themselves as a Voyageurs Canada 92 group and by sponsoring the group.

This presents a good opportunity for the young people of this riding to get to know more about other Canadians. I hope they will seek out community groups to sponsor them, arrange to pick up an application kit at my constituency office and make their application as soon as possible.

Surprise birthday cake for visiting pastor

Senior League

by Winnifred Barnum

On Sunday, April 5, a very special birthday cake, (made by Alice Todd) to honour our Sunday evening Chapel Pastor was served. He had dinner with his mother in the residents' dining room and at this time he was presented with the cake and everyone sang Happy Birthday to him. Afterwards, he held Chapel Service and Alice Jones played the organ. He was surprised and pleased to be honoured this way.

Monday was our scheduled day for a shopping trip to Huntsville. We were told to board the bus at 10:00 a.m., but were delayed until 11:30 a.m. By the time we got to Huntsville and had our lunch there wasn't much time to shop. We enjoyed the trip anyway and sincerely thank those who helped with the residents.

In the evening Ena and York Marion showed the movies in the auditorium. They were "The Living Ocean" and "Hank The Cave Peanut". Thank you Ena and York.

Tuesday Chapel Service was held by Rev. Ed Moll, thanks very much for the efforts on our behalf.

Crafts were held in the craft room in the afternoon.

Wednesday afternoon we were invited to a tea at the Carnarvon United Church. Doris Robertson took a bus load of the residents. We always enjoy going there. They think of such novel ideas. This year the members wore old fashioned hats made to represent almost any occurrence in life, such as hot days and sun burn, things needed on the beach, Easter bonnets etc. We were welcomed by the President, and then Eleanor Hamilton presented the program of a parade of hats, explaining what each one represented and the name of the wearer. This was followed by a sing-a-long led by Kay Stephen who can really get everyone singing.

Of course we had a lovely tea preceded by the Easter Bunny with a basket of goodies. We all enjoyed it very much and thank them heartily. Proceeds went to help Telecare Hotline. Thanks to the volunteer ladies, Bonnie Fullan, Jean Robson and Mabel Deacon.

Wednesday evening Earl Cooper and Kathy Owens were here to give us a lovely evening with their varied music and we thank them.

Thursday the tea party was provided by the Haliburton Anglican Church Ladies and served by Florence Webb, Ellen Morrison, Rose Coneybeare and Ruth Emley. We thank them greatly.

In the evening Dorothy Evans and Norma Amyotte came to call bingo. We sincerely thank them and always look forward to them coming.

Friday being Happy Hour, our guest entertainers were Ed and Billy Picard, whom we thoroughly enjoyed. They are a gifted pair. The volunteers were Ellen Holden, Bonnie Fullan, Mary Guillemin and barman Don Holden with Doris Robertson, Linda Fry and Greg Sawyer overseeing everything.

Friday morning was Residents' Council due to the fact that we went to Huntsville Monday, our usual day. It was a successful meeting. There is a change in our program, we are going to have a speaker to talk on a subject concerning seniors. Our first guest was Linda Fry and the topic was Fitness and You. It was very enlightening.

The residents of Hyland Crest wish to thank Lee Oster who donated the beautiful bouquet of carnations for the enjoyment of the residents, with the proceeds going to Sick Children's Hospital Fund. We do thank him sincerely.

The Program will be conducted in the Townships of Glamorgan, Lutterworth, Minden, Sherborne, Snowdon, Stanhope at small selected spray blocks only.

CARDS OF THANKS

My sincere thanks to everyone, for the cards, calls, visits, flowers and gifts during my stay in Sunnybrook Hospital and convalescence at home. It was very much appreciated.
Murray Daniels

The family of the late Mina Thompson, would like to thank our friends and relatives for the kindness shown to us in our recent bereavement. Thanks to Dr. Hartwick for his care in her last months and Dr. Heyes for his years of care. To the Monk Funeral Home for helping us through this trying time. A special thanks to the ladies of St. Anthony's Palliative Care, Marc Stag, Bob White and Father Sal. Above all thanks to the nurses and staff at Extendicare Nursing Home, Haliburton. The love and tenderness shown my mother in her last days will never be forgotten.
The Waltons

Your heartfelt messages, cards and concerns helped to ease the burden we endured with the recent loss of our son Jeffrey. Special thanks to Kirsten Monk of Gordon A. Monk Funeral Home for her careful attention to detail and Rev. Ed Moll for the special effort to ease our pain. Thank you, everyone.
The Bounsall Family

CARDS OF THANKS

Mere words are not enough to express the gratitude we feel to those of you who showed us how much you cared during our terrible loss of our precious daughter, Breanna. Heartfelt thanks to our families and friends, near and far, who stood by and comforted us with their love and presence. To Doctor Michael Boyer and his associates, the pediatric nurses and staff at Peterborough Civic Hospital, all the nurses and staff from the Nightingale who provided so much love and support to Breanna at home making her and Mommy's life a little easier and full of many memories. Special thanks to Dr. Bob Heyes and staff, and to Dr. Robin Humphreys and his fellow neurosurgeons, all the nurses and staff at the Hospital for Sick Children. The many ambulance attendants from Haliburton and Peterborough County for the wonderful service. To the MNR, Minden, sincere thanks for allowing Judy the time to be with Breanna, and to Mrs. Ruth Murray of R.F. Downey Public School for the love and devotion in making sure Breanna was very much a part of the kindergarten class, from beginning to the end. Grateful thanks to Cheryl Palmer, Chaplain from Sick Kids for your comfort and support, to Colombe Hammond for the beautiful eulogy and to all of you who made Breanna's service so very special, especially Gord Monk and his staff who provided so much assistance to us. Forgive us if you have not been named specifically; so many people gave us such comfort and support over the years and now, and we will never forget how you have touched our hearts, as our daughter touched so many of yours. We are forever grateful
Judy and Randy Barras
